What is the COLDEST PLACE ON EARTH?

As well as being the coldest, Antarctica is also the driest and windiest continent. Deserts are places where very little rain or snow falls. So even though there is all that ice, Antarctica is a desert!

Follow the penguins to take you to the coldest place on Earth. It's Antarctica, in the extreme south. In parts of Antarctica, the air temperatures are the coldest on earth, at about -94°C.

(Water boils at 100°C. Our body temperature is 37°C. Water freezes into ice at 0°C. A very cold winter's day in the UK might be one or two degrees below freezing, so try to imagine -94°C!)

On average Antarctica gets about 10 cm of snow a year, and no rain because it's too cold. It's so cold in Antarctica that moisture in the air immediately freezes. The moisture can form tiny ice crystals, so small

The Song of Bruno, The Chocolate Labrador

Hello morning! Hello my people!
Let's start the day!
Love me. Feed me. Play with me.
Please. Please. Please.

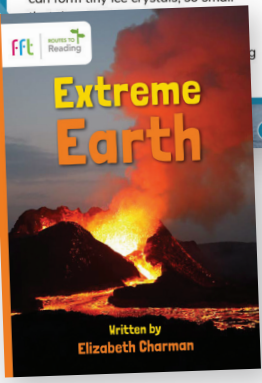

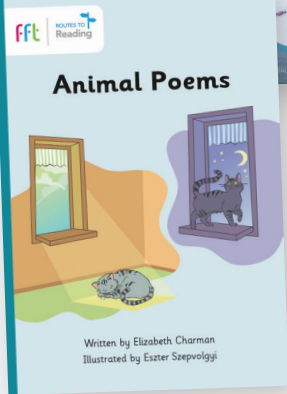

Look, it's me! I'm on my back, doing my wriggle trick.
How sweet am I?

Are you putting the kettle on?
I think I haven't eaten for days.

I'm a hungry boy and I want my dinner.
If I don't eat soon, I'll get thinner and thinner.
Gobble. Gulp. Down it goes.

Shall I tell you a secret?
(His brown eyes shine with delight.)

I already went to visit Bob next door and we had a packet of digestives.

"The children found the non-fiction texts both engaging and informative. There was a wide range of activities and each one helped the children to make progress with their comprehension skills."
